NOTE: if you do not complete an essay, you are still required to submit a blank document via Blackboard to be allowed to progress to the next Module of the course.

Academic Integrity

It is important that you:

- know what plagiarism is, and why it is an academic offence
- are aware that all material you use from online and print sources should be acknowledged properly
- know that if you re-use parts of your own work, you must acknowledge this (to not do so is self-plagiarism)

Ways of reducing the risk of unintentional Plagiarism:

- Knowing where and how you collected information you use, developing your writing skills and understanding the rules of good academic practice, such as using a consistent referencing style.
- Library's online course, Olivia provides information and examples on the different types of plagiarism commonly committed, and advice on how to avoid it.

Please speak to a member of the teaching staff or personal tutor if you have any concerns, or contact the Library's Education and Research Support team.

Academic Integrity

- All submitted coursework is marked with Anti-Plagiarism software.
- Please ensure you reference other people's work correctly using the Vancouver style of referencing (see Imperial College Vancouver referencing guide)
- Any cases of plagiarism will be dealt with according to Faculty of Medicine's disciplinary procedures.
- Advice on correct referencing and avoidance of plagiarism is available here:

Imperial College London Talks

To Do... The GH Paper Facebook

Please send an ID photo and a brief description of yourself to Helen King by 28 September. An example...

Mariam Sbaiti. I grew up between a quartier populaire and a well-to-do neighbourhood in the city of Brussels. I had planned to go South but I went North West instead. I graduated in Medicine at King's College London in 2006 and intercalated a BSc in Medical Sciences and International Health at UCL a long time ago. Between my 2 Foundation years by the sea in Cornwall and Brighton, I took a year to live in Spain. I then worked as a Trust Grade SHO in Sexual Health & HIV at 56 Dean Street (Chelsea & Westminster Hospital NHS Trust), a few doors down from the site where the first venereal disease clinic in England opened its doors in 1747. I'm currently completing a Public Health & Policy MSc at the London School for Hygiene & Tropical Medicine and I work as a Global Health Teaching Fellow at Imperial College 3 days a week. Here, I am mainly involved in coordinating the Global Health BSc and I lead the Society and Health Course for Year 1 medical students.

I am fascinated by the Mediterranean, because so many different people look out to it as their sea. I like good music. I recently coordinated a bicycle-powered cinema.
